LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL
MAIN SERIES, 1822-1860

On the 636 rolls of this microfilm publication are reproduced unbound letters, with their enclosures, that were received by the Adjutant General during the period 1822-60. They are a part of Record Group 94, Records of the Adjutant General's Office.

On June 16, 1775, the Continental Congress resolved that there should be an Adjutant General of the Continental Army and on the following day selected Horatio Gates for the position. Although there have been numerous organizational and functional changes and some variations in rank and title, an Adjutant General has been continuously in office since that date.

During the first half of the 19th century the Adjutant General's Department was the department of records, orders, and correspondence of the militia. Its major duties included recording, authenticating, and communicating to troops and individuals in the military service all orders, instructions, and regulations issued by the Secretary of War; preparing and distributing commissions and military decorations; managing the recruiting service; and consolidating the general returns of the Army.

The letters and enclosures here reproduced were received from officers and enlisted men of the Army, the Secretary of War, the President, officials of other Government departments, Members of Congress, Governors of States and Territories, private persons, and business firms. They relate to such topics as the appointment, recruitment, transfer, pay, promotion, leave, discharge, and other personnel actions affecting officers and enlisted men of the Army; orders, regulations, and other issuances of the War Department; military expeditions and campaigns; military installations and organizations; and Indian affairs.

The letters here reproduced encompass the years from 1822 to 1860, and are a part of the largest series of letters received by the Adjutant General's Office. The entire series extends to 1889.

According to the record keeping practice of the time, letters received were entered in registers alphabetically by the initial letter of the surname or office of the writer and thereunder chronologically by date of receipt. The letters are arranged to correspond with the arrangement of entries in the registers and are numbered in a separation sequence under each letter of the alphabet for each year, except that for the period from 1822 to 1851 the "I" and "J" letters are intermingled. The letters received are endorsed on the back or on a separate cover sheet with the name of the writer, the date of writing, the place of writing, the purport of the contents, the date received, and the file number assigned in the register. The file designation consists of the number, the initial letter of the correspondent's name or office, and the year the letter was received.

Because the letters were numbered and entered in the registers according to the dates of receipt rather than the dates of writing' and because there often was a considerable lapse of time between the date of writing and the receipt of a letter in the Adjutant General's Office, there is some overlapping of dates covered by the registers. This overlapping is reflected in the filing arrangement of the letters.

Some of the letters bear file citations other than those of the Adjutant General's Office. These citations indicate that at one time or another the letters had been filed in some other office. Some letters received and related papers, for one reason or another, were not entered in the registers or numbered. They are arranged by initial letter of the name of the writer or the office and are filed by year at the end of the registered letters bearing the same initial letters. If the name of the writer is not known or cannot be identified the letter is usually filed at the end of all the letters for the year in which it was written; in a few instances it is filed by initial letter of the subject. Occasionally drafts of orders, replies to letters received and related working papers were filed in the series. (This is especially true for the working papers of Adj. Gen. Roger Jones during the 1830's.) These papers are arranged in the same manner as the letters that were not registered or numbered.

There are other variations in the arrangement pattern. (1) Some years after the original filing of these letters the Adjutant General's Office attempted to bring together materials relating to certain subjects, which resulted in "consolidated files." For the 1822-60 period, these "consolidations" generally varied in quantity from two to a few hundred papers. Cross-reference slips appear throughout the file, some prepared by the Adjutant General's Office and others by the National Archives, indicating the file number under which the letters were consolidated. Following these introductory remarks is a list of some of the more significant consolidations and the rolls on which they have been reproduced. (2) In some instances errors were made by the clerks when the letters were entered in the registers; sometimes registry numbers were omitted and at other times numbers were repeated. Where the numbers are repeated and different letters bear the same file designation, the National Archives has added, in brackets, "No 1" and "No. 2" to the file designation.

Some of the documents originally filed in this series are no longer in the series, others are incomplete, and some enclosures have been separated from their transmittal letters. Some of the registered communications were referred to other offices or agencies and eventually became incorporated in the files of those agencies. Others were removed and filed in different series of records of the Adjutant General's Office. Letters transmitting enclosures containing information that the Adjutant General was especially charged with keeping, such as muster rolls and returns of military organizations, departments, and posts were filed in the series, but the enclosures were removed and filed separately. In these instances no cross-references were placed in the files. Other removals frequently were documented by means of cross-references. In cases where cross-references were missing but there were obvious clues as to where the letters were filed, the National Archives has inserted cross-references for the period from 1822 through 1849; thereafter such information has been placed in the entries in the registers.

Although some letters originally filed in this series are no longer in it, sometimes reports and other documents believed to be missing are in the series but are filed under the initial letter of an intermediate office or official. For example, a report by Capt. R. B. Marcy dated November 25, 1851, relating to exploration of the country between Fort Smith, Ark., and Dona Ana, N. Mex., was transmitted by Marcy directly to the Adjutant General. The report was entered in the register for 1851 under the "M's" and numbered 489. But an earlier report by Capt. Marcy on the same general subject was transmitted to the Adjutant General by Brig. Gen. M. Arbuckle and filed as A 13 1850. Another report by Capt. Marcy dated January 15, 1855, relating to Indians in Texas either was not entered in the register or became separated from its transmittal letter and is, therefore, filed after the registered "M" letters for 1855. Generally, if the reports or other communications were not submitted directly by the writer to the Adjutant General, they were transmitted by superior offices or officers. For example, Bvt. Maj. D. H. Rucker's report of December 23, 1849, relating to his activities in helping overland emigrants to California, was transmitted to the Adjutant General by Gen. B. F. Smith on January 12, 1850, and is filed as S 120 1850. On the other hand, a copy of Bvt. Col. H. Leavenworth's account of an expedition against the Arikara Indians in 1823 was transmitted to the Adjutant General's Office on February 1, 1824, by Lt. H. Smith, an aide-de-camp, and is, therefore, filed as S 14 1824. The original of the report, however, was transmitted by Gen. H. Atkinson and is filed as an enclosure to A 61 1823.

In the same record group are other related records. Among them are Letters Sent by the Office of The Adjutant General (Main Series), 1800-go (Microcopy 565); and Letters Received by the Office of The Adjutant General, 1805-21 (Microcopy 566).
